HIV, Human Development and Mobility in Asia and the Pacific
Phase II

Expected RP Outcome(s): Enabling environment created and capacities of key regional and national stakeholders developed to respond to the human development, governance, human rights, gender and inter-country challenges of HIV/AIDS, mobility and trafficking

Expected Output(s):

- 1 Regional and national responses developed that enable the access of people on the move to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support services
- 2 Innovative initiatives developed at regional and national levels that reduce the socio-economic vulnerabilities of migrants and trafficked women to HIV stigma and discrimination.
- 3 HIV integrated into MDG based national strategies, plans and multi-sectoral responses
- 4 Key stakeholders have access to strategic multi-country research, best practice tools and publications on HIV, mobility and trafficking

Narrative

The Asia and Pacific region is home to the second largest number of people living with HIV and AIDS, a rapidly feminizing epidemic, and the second largest cross-border movement of people in the world. The socio-economic inequalities that drive the HIV epidemic, also drive mobility and often the conditions under which people move places them at high risk of HIV infection. The Regional programme will focus on creating an enabling environment for reducing the vulnerabilities of people to HIV and promoting safe mobility. Regional and inter-country capacity of key stakeholders will be developed to respond to the human development, governance, human rights, and gender challenges of HIV/AIDS, mobility and trafficking in the region. In the context of regional efforts to promote the achievement of MDGs, the regional programme will build capacity for costing and developing comprehensive, multi-sectoral responses. The regional project will work in close partnership with the UNAIDS family, inter-regional bodies, their member governments.
