Narrative

The economic dynamism of the Asia-Pacific region has lifted large pools of the population out of poverty, but the region is still home to two thirds of those living on less than $1 a day – and women are disproportionately represented among them. Women in the region have experienced both opportunities and setbacks. This project will help promote inclusive growth, gender equality and the achievement of the MDGs by building a sustainable corps of gender experts within the region with specific expertise and capacities for engendering MDG-based national sustainable development strategies (NSDS), institutional gender mainstreaming and ending gender-based violence. The project will support a regional gender community of practice to strengthen regional gender capacities and facilitate consolidation of resources and learning and regional exchanges. The project will provide technical advisory support to engendering regional and national level initiatives and policy dialogues.
