Brief Description

While all Syrians have been impacted by the crisis, women and girls have faced distinct threats and challenges during the conflict due to the entrenched complexity of the issues they experience every day. This "crisis within a crisis" is impacting the Syrian social fabric and weakening individuals' and communities' resilience, especially women with increased triple burden and increasing resort to negative coping methods. Alarming spikes in suicide rates among male adults are being reported across the country, as many men – traditional breadwinners in Syrian society - increasingly fail to provide for their families. This is putting additional strain on female headed households and increasing the psychosocial impact of Covid-19. The SEIA also indicates increased violence and Gender-based violence (GBV) cases. Syria's social protection systems – decimated by years of crisis – are currently incapable of responding to these complex protection and psychosocial needs. Invariably, the doubled crisis led to an increase in workload, which is not have necessarily led to greater empowerment or freedom for women.

The proposed project has been developed in line with Syria country priorities 'on gender equality, elimination of GBV and women empowerment. It aims to build resilience of vulnerable Syrian women and men with a multi-dimensional assistance and considering the global gender framework for holistic support.

Gender Justice and Empowerment Vulnerable Women programme follows a guiding approach: Human Rights-Based Approach, Survivor-Centered Approach, Community-Based Approach and Systems Approach. It focuses on prevention of violence, mitigation to reducing risks and responding to consequences of GBV. Focusing on gender and age shift the mood form quantitative intervention to qualitative one. Gender and conflict sensitive methodologies and tools will contribute to enhance social cohesion and peace building. Furthermore, UNDP will follow a community-led strategy at different levels to empower communities as the first actors of building resilience and maintaining own protection, rather than mere passive and helpless victims, and thus helping them better address the causes and consequences of the on-going violence in a sustainable fashion. The project will contribute to SDGs # 1, 5, 10 and 16.
