I. SITUATION ANALYSIS

A. Problem to be addressed:

Number of PCs in operational use today including both business and consumer/home use is approaching 10 million in Turkey.

Concurrently, new computing platforms called Netbooks and Nettops are pushing PC prices to the south of $300. At these price points, there is expected to be more PCs per head of population yet the distributional impact is more crucial to digital divide. In the past most well off households had to do with one home PC for the family and now they will be purchasing one PC per household member. The key is not to be satisfied with this favourable outcome but take proactive steps for households that still go away with no computer at all to have affordable access via targeted donations.

The project is for bridging the digital divide among digitally excluded citizens who lack home access to computers in rural Turkey. It is innovative in nature.

B. Relevance to the Country Programme:

The UN Development Assistant Framework (UNDAF) Turkey (2006-2009) highlights the importance of ICT for development in the country program output 1.1.3 mentioning the achievement target for the enhancement of access to information and participation through effective utilization and diffusion of ICT technologies.

UNDP Country Cooperation Framework (CCF): CCF (2001-2005) identifies Governance and Decentralization as one of the two main cooperation areas of UNDP in Turkey with particular focus on promoting transparency, efficiency and effectiveness of public sector services and underlines the importance of ICT as a major tool to foster good governance.

The 2006-2010 country programme aims to support the multiple social and economic reforms and national development priorities in line with EU accession and in support of UNDAF outcomes, specifically, focusing on "capacity development for democratic governance" as one of the three key issues.

In addition, due to high importance of the matter, the theme for the National Human Development Report (NHDR) of Turkey for 2004 was chosen as "ICT and Human Development." The NHDR highlights the key role that ICT can play as an effective tool in helping to achieve Turkey's development goals, and to help inform the process of strengthening the role of ICT in a manner that fosters an open information society. The analysis in the report identifies entry points for ICT to bridge the digital divide in Turkey and opportunities that ICT can bring to Turkey's advancement of democratic governance, poverty reduction, and a strengthened education system.

The cohesion with the 'National Rural Development Strategy' (2007-2013) and the '2006-2010 Information Society Strategy and Attached Action Plan' will be ensured in the implementation of the project.

II. Strategy

As of January 2006, SPO has the legal mandate to establish Regional Development Agencies in order to create a suitable business environment for domestic and foreign companies to invest in Turkey.

As a result of a mutually productive and beneficial exchange among the project stakeholders, the project is to be piloted in the 'Cukurova' regional development zone (Adana and Mersin provinces) through the organizational support of 'Cukurova Development Agency' (www.cka.org.tr).

A 'phased approach' to be applied in executing the initiative in general: In the pilots, mini PIAC (Public Internet Access Centre) model will be implemented first and then it will be expanded into the rural school and health clinic.

The project has a high scalability potential as a total of 26 regional development agencies will be established by the end of 2009 across the country to promote regional competitiveness.

The tele-medicine model, which was piloted in Adiyaman by Intel, Turkcell and UNDP, will be replicated in the selected villages of Mersin and Adana.

The interaction between farmers will be increased by utilizing the existing social media platforms and portals for Community Generated Content available for farmers. In that context, 'Happy Farmer' application developed by the Intel Ireland Innovation Centre will be customized for rural platforms within the project scope. In addition, there will be other contents to be used in the village school such as 'skool' (www.skool.intel.com) developed by Intel, Community Generated Content produced by teachers and students and also 'Vitamin' developed by the ISV – SEBIT.

The available content for farmers, students and rural communities in general will be adapted into local context through trainings, workshops and localizations as needed.

The results of the pilot project will be reviewed and reported through a social impact study, which will provide the knowledge and lessons learned for the expansion of the project.

The primary direct beneficiaries of this pilot project will be the rural and digitally excluded citizens, and socio-economically disadvantaged people in the villages. At minimum 100 female and 100 male villagers in two selected villages will benefit from the outputs of this project.

The selection of pilot villages will be made based on the availability of following factors:

- i. A strategic agricultural product to promote
- ii. Vulnerable rural conditions to address
- iii. Availability of the agriculture consultant for the village
- iv. Presence of a school and a clinic
- v. Ease of accessibility to the village from the city center
- vi. A broadband Internet access
- vii. Remarkable population size (more than 500)
- viii. Willingness of citizens
