Executive Summary

Purpose of the Assessment

The purpose of this assessment is to assess the capacity, operations and scope of CSOs at the National and sub-national levels. Specifically, the team of consultants was tasked to assess the socio-economic, politico-cultural, legal environment and context within which CSOs operate; the human, material, financial and technical capacities of the CSOs operating at the regional and national levels; and determine specific anti-corruption activities which CSOs are involved.

The findings will help UNDP in supporting UNODC toward achieving “Support to Anti-Corruption in Nigeria” project’s third objective, which seeks to achieve the stated outcome: “civil society organizations empowered to increase the provision of services and their participation in anti-corruption activities enhanced.”

Project Background

The “Support to Anti-Corruption in Nigeria” project (FED/2012/022-161) (NGAX60) has been formulated in collaboration with national stakeholders and is funded by the European Union (EU) under the 10th European Development Fund (EDF). The EU and the Government of Nigeria have entrusted the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) with the implementation of the project, which will support the Nigerian Government by contributing to Nigeria’s efforts in enhancing transparency, accountability and combating corruption. The objectives of the project are:

- i) To provide effective support to anti-corruption coordination, policy formulation and legislation;
- ii) To strengthen institutional and operational capacity in the main anti-corruption agencies, with an emphasis on cooperation; and
- iii) To enhance accountability, transparency and public engagement.

Assessment Questions, Design, Methods and Limitations

The assessment was conducted in seventeen (17) states namely; Adamawa, Anambra, Bauchi, Benue, Cross River, Edo, Ekiti, Enugu, FCT Abuja, Kaduna, Kano, Lagos, Oyo, Plateau, Rivers, Sokoto, and Taraba.

A total of one hundred and fifty four (154) CSOs were mapped in the 17 states, out of which ninety seven (97) were assessed based on the eligibility criteria (i.e. anti-corruption focus and registration with the Corporate Affairs Commission [CAC], or in the process of registering with the CAC).

Assessment Questions

The assessment satisfactorily answered the following questions:

- i) What is the socio-economic, politico-cultural, legal environment and context within which CSOs operate in Nigeria?
- ii) What is the human, material, financial and technical capacity of the CSOs operating at the regional and national levels?
- iii) Which specific anti-corruption activities are the CSOs involved in?

Data Collection Instruments

The assessment team used Organisational Capacity Assessment (OCA) tool to assess the organisational capacity of the identified anti-corruption CSOs, covering a broad range of components - including financial viability, advocacy capacity, service provision, legal environment, infrastructure and public image.

Through a guided, interactive self-assessment with the anti-corruption CSOs, the team facilitated the use of the OCA tool, in order to enable organizational-learning, team-sharing, and reflective self-assessment within each CSO.

The team also used training-needs checklist to identify capacity gaps of each of the CSOs assessed.

Sampling Strategy

The team assessed the organizational capacity of anti-corruption CSOs that are registered with the Corporate Affairs Commission (CAC), which were already identified through a mapping exercise. In the process of assessing the mapped CSOs, the team also identified and assessed more anti-corruption CSOs, using a snowballing approach.

The team sampled and interviewed some key informants from relevant government ministries, departments and agencies in each state, to examine the legal environment and context within which the CSOs operate.

Limitations

Insecurity posed challenges in accessing some of the identified CSOs - most especially in states of the North-Eastern geopolitical zone.

Resources and time constraints also compelled the team to limit the number of work days in the field per state. This had more effect in places where the key informants were unavoidably engaged in other personal and/or official undertakings.

Findings and Conclusions

The legal environment for CSOs is still not quite favourable. The Companies and Allied Matters Act (CAMA) of 1990 still regulates the registration and operation of both CSOs and for-profit organizations in Nigeria. CSOs working at the national level must register with the Corporate Affairs Commission, a process that can be completed in about a week. State and local-level CSOs and community-based organizations (CBOs) must register with the relevant authorities in their area, which usually takes about a month. A CSO may only operate at the level at which it registers.

CSOs appear to be responding to communities' needs, such as attempting to alleviate poverty and in some cases work to resolve conflict, while also engaging in areas such as improving health status, environmental protection and women's empowerment.

Most of the CSOs assessed still struggle to build constituencies, often due to lack of resources. Financial Viability continued to be one of the weakest dimensions of CSOs' sustainability. Advocacy appears to be one of the strongest dimensions. The degree of CSO cooperation with state and local government varies among the states visited.

CSOs in the vast majority of the states provide a wide range of services, from basic services such as education, health, water, food, and hygiene, to areas such as anticorruption, youth empowerment, and advocacy.

Recommendations

- a) Increase financial resource mobilization targeted to CSOs by creating Nigerian based funding streams/grant schemes for anti-corruption programming that could be accessed in a competitive tender and grants-writing submission process.
- b) Provide technical assistance through immediate training on articulation of operational policies and creation of financial operations management systems. If technical assistance in reaching all affected CSOs proves costly or slow, it is recommended that CSOs be used to train their peers.
- c) Provide technical assistance through immediate training and knowledge diffusion for CSOs on international best practices on ways, means, modes, mediums, of combating corruption and facilitating public engagement in order to strengthen CSOs' programmatic activities and effectiveness.
- d) Form an anti-corruption CSO support group/professional association to continually diffuse best practices to new CSOs entering the anti-corruption space and to enhance internal network, alliance, coalitions, partnerships, and cooperation across programs, thematic focus areas, research, and advocacy initiatives.

Background

Nigeria remains one of the most corrupt nations in the world - ranking 144 out of 177 countries/territories, with a score of 25 out of 100, based on Transparency International's Corruption Perception Index report of 2013.

Nigeria has ratified both the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC) and the African Union Convention Against Corruption. These international treaties impose obligation on Nigeria to ensure the participation of civil society in the fight against corruption.

The UNCAC in Article 5 provides as follows:

"Each state party shall, in accordance with the fundamental principles of its legal system, develop and implement or maintain effective, coordinated anti-corruption policies that promote the participation of society and reflect the principles of the rule of law, proper management of public affairs and public property, integrity, transparency and accountability."

The UNCAC, also in Article 13, provides for the engagement of civil society in the anti-corruption programme.

Corruption is generally acknowledged to be difficult to tackle across the world particularly in multi-ethnic, and fragile states. Its consequences badly affect socio-economic development and stability in developing countries like Nigeria.

CSOs are growing very fast in Nigeria and have played a major role in development and governance processes since the past 30 years, especially in the institution of democracy. They were involved in Constitutional Review and played vital roles in protesting hike in petroleum products prices, and military rule in Nigeria in the past. CSOs also play important roles in election monitoring and evaluation.

Civil society can perform intermediary and oversight roles between the state and the people voicing social interests, grievances and other genuine popular concerns as some of its functions. They are the best means of educating the public to demand good governance, quality goods, service delivery, transparency and accountability. The required levels of transparency and accountability can be achievable only when civil society is engaged in oversight function.

CSOs began to flourish unhindered after Nigeria's return to democracy in 1999. Nigerian government continued to have a generally cordial attitude towards CSOs. The government, particularly at the national level, consulted with CSOs on many issues, such as public security and constitutional amendments, suggesting that governmental trust of the sector is growing.

They continue to work on diverse issues, such as human rights, anti-corruption, environment, and women's and youth empowerment. In the last couple of years, professional associations, including the Nigerian Bar Association, participated in debates around the constitutional review and submitted memoranda proposing amendments to the 1999 constitution. At the local level, CBOs focused on service provision, such as vocational training programs for women and youth.

CSO sustainability in Nigeria remained largely stable over the recent years. The only improvement noted was in the area of service provision. There were over 57,000 CSOs registered at the national level in 2012, an increase of more than 3,000 since 2011¹.

Objectives of the Mapping and Assessment

The objective of the consultancy included:

- a. To map existing anti-corruption CSOs expertise by theme, geographical area and type of activity (e.g. focusing on advocacy, research, service delivery etc);
- b. Facilitate consultations with CSOs, government and relevant stakeholders to gather information and describe the overall environment and context within which CSOs operate in Nigeria;
- c. Facilitate consultation with individual and or groups of CSOs (as appropriate) to gather relevant information on the following: vision, mission and legal, infrastructure and internal governance structure, internal policy especially on anti-corruption programming. Areas of cooperation, potentials, resource mobilization, and capacity development activities; and
- d. Facilitate capacity needs assessment and trainings-needs assessment.

Methodology

The assessment was conducted in seventeen (17) states namely; Adamawa, Anambra, Bauchi, Benue, Cross River, Edo, Ekiti, Enugu, FCT Abuja, Kaduna, Kano, Lagos, Oyo, Plateau, Rivers, Sokoto, and Taraba.

A total of one hundred and fifty four (154) CSOs were mapped in the 17 states, out of which ninety seven (97) were assessed based on the eligibility criteria (i.e. anti-corruption focus and registration with the Corporate Affairs Commission [CAC], or in the process of registering with the CAC).

Assessment Questions

The assessment satisfactorily answered the following questions:

- i) What is the socio-economic, politico-cultural, legal environment and context within which CSOs operate in Nigeria?
- ii) What is the human, material, financial and technical capacity of the CSOs operating at the regional and national levels?
- iii) Which specific anti-corruption activities are the CSOs involved in?

Data Collection Instruments

The assessment team used Organisational Capacity Assessment (OCA)² tool to assess the organisational capacity of the identified anti-corruption CSOs, covering a broad range of components - including financial viability, advocacy capacity, service provision, legal environment, infrastructure and public image.

Each component was scored according to evidence-based and relevant examples of recent or historical conditions, and events – specifically in the context of anti-corruption programming.

Through a guided, interactive self-assessment with the anti-corruption CSOs, the team facilitated the use of the OCA tool, in order to enable organizational-learning, team-sharing, and reflective self-assessment within each CSO.

² OCA tool attached as Annex II

The OCA tool is tailored to identify areas of need within management systems, project performance, program performance, and networking as well as reinforce healthy organizational practices. Through this process, both a healthy, focused dialogue on organizational areas was promoted, and led to the development of an Action Plan identifying areas of high priority (trainings needs etc.), ensuing steps, responsible staff identified, estimated completion dates, and additional support identified.

The team also used training-needs checklist to identify capacity gaps of each of the CSOs assessed.

Finally, the team used other secondary sources, including both national and international organizations' reports on the role of CSOs' in anti-corruption activities in Nigeria, which enabled triangulation of the findings from the assessment.

Sampling Strategy

The team assessed the organizational capacity of anti-corruption CSOs that are registered with the Corporate Affairs Commission (CAC), which were already identified through a mapping exercise. In the process of assessing the mapped CSOs, the team also identified and assessed more anti-corruption CSOs, using a snowballing approach.

The team sampled and interviewed some key informants from relevant government ministries, departments and agencies in each state, to examine the legal environment and context within which the CSOs operate.

Limitations

Insecurity posed challenges in accessing some of the identified CSOs - most especially in states of the North-Eastern geopolitical zone.

Resources and time constraints also compelled the team to limit the number of work days in the field per state. This had more effect in places where the key informants were unavoidably engaged in other personal and/or official undertakings.

Findings

The legal environment for CSOs did not change notably in recent years. The Companies and Allied Matters Act (CAMA) of 1990 still regulates the registration and operation of both CSOs and for-profit organizations in Nigeria. CSOs working at the national level must register with the Corporate Affairs Commission, a process that can be completed in about a week. Most of the CSOs assessed still struggle to build constituencies, often due to lack of resources. Financial Viability continued to be one of the weakest dimensions of CSO sustainability. Advocacy appears to be one of the strongest dimensions. The degree of CSO cooperation with state and local government varies among the states discussed in this report.

CSOs in the vast majority of the states visited provide a wide range of services, from basic services such as education, health, water, food, and hygiene, to areas such as alternative energy promotion, natural resources management, youth empowerment, and advocacy.

Lessons Learned/Challenges

CSOs in some of the states visited were initially uninterested in the activities. Many complained that organizations in the past came to assess them but in the end rendered no aid or assistance to them. Their lack of interest in the exercise was traced to their past experiences where consultants were sent to them periodically by different organizations to collect data, yet the requesting organizations failed to give feedback and assistance as promised. Another accusation was that funds were not given to active and functional CSOs but instead to their “seasonal” peers.

Proposed Capacity Development Plan/Strategy

A key capacity gap of CSOs in the region is their lack of ability to undertake strategic planning processes and break them down into operational plans. While many CSOs in the study had strategic plans in place, these plans, besides being outdated, did not always match available resources and existing capacity. Even in cases where a relatively robust strategic plan was in place, there were no clear ways by which it could be transferred to an operational level on the ground. Strategic planning thus had little real value for CSOs that were consulted in this study. One reason behind this breakdown is internal. CSO staff members generally lack the skills to plan strategically and transfer them into associated operational activities. The gap is further compounded by weaknesses in the set-up and operations of organizational boards.

Recommendations

From the field assessments carried out, it was apparent that there is a dire need to intervene and strengthen the capacity of CSOs in order to transform them into more effective and responsive institutions, as major players ensuring public accountability in Nigeria. Specific areas are discussed below and the following are recommended:

- a) Increase financial resource mobilization targeted to CSOs by creating Nigerian based funding streams/grant schemes for anti-corruption programming that could be accessed in a competitive tender and grants-writing submission process. Closely linked to this, should be the provision of technical assistance through immediate training on proposal development and grant writing for all CSOs. They should not be saddled with the responsibility of providing anti-corruption surveillance and simultaneously operating business ventures on the side (as was found in the field assessments) to generate income to run their anti-corruption activities. In parallel to Nigerian based funding streams, CSOs should be given a list of international donors (be they foreign government institutions, private foundations, institutes, etc) that can be accessed to expand their pool of funding sources.

Risk/Implication: Perennial lack of funds may deter CSOs from participation in activities and continuing advocacy on anti-corruption, which may weaken the overall environment towards enhancing transparency, accountability, and combating corruption.

- b) Assistance with infrastructural upgrade of agency offices by providing refurbishments in some instances and office equipment (ex: computers, tables, chairs, phones, printers, AC, fans, etc) in others with a view to ensuring and providing a conducive environment for all CSOs to operate in before anti-corruption activities are initiated thereby increasing motivation, moral, focus, and effectiveness.
- c) Provision of technical assistance through immediate training on articulation of operational policies and creation of financial operations management systems. If technical assistance in reaching all affected CSOs proves costly or slow, it is recommended that CSOs be used to train their peers on how to develop detailed policies.

Risk/Implication: If UNDP does not ensure this, a major risk ensues as there will be no adequate assurance of effective implementation of anti-corruption programs and with staff turnover the risk for operational interruptions becomes severe given no medium for knowledge transfer. Finally adherence to documented policies and systems should be set as requirements to accessing Nigerian-based grants recommended above in Point A.

- d) Provision of technical assistance through immediate training and knowledge diffusion for CSOs on international best practices on ways, means, modes, mediums, of combating corruption and facilitating public engagement in order to strengthen CSOs' programmatic activities and effectiveness.

- e) Forming of anti-corruption CSO support group/professional association to continually diffuse best practices to new CSOs entering the anti-corruption space and to enhance internal network, alliance, coalitions, partnerships, and cooperation across programs, thematic focus areas, research, and advocacy initiatives.

- f) Replication of Foot Soldier Corp: This could be achieved through the anti-corruption CSO support group/professional association recommended in point E allowing for leading CSOs in each state to assist each other in the process. There are synergies in recommendations E and F which should be recognized, captured, and leveraged upon.
